(b)(6)

I received your 10 July email (below), which touches upon the required "formal" review of the completed manuscript (required for the reasons indicated in your email), as distinguished from the "informal" review of chapters submitted on a rolling basis also agreed to in our telephone conversation on 28 June.

[redacted] (b)(5)

This accurately summarizes what we discussed and agreed to on 28 June concerning my submissions. I look forward to receiving back from PRB, with its comments, the first five chapters that were submitted on 6 July so that I may promptly forward them to my line editor. I would be disappointed and concerned if the filing of a civil suit by my husband and me earlier this month against certain current and former government officials had anything to do with a change in position by the PRB regarding our 28 June agreement about prepublication review of my book. To the extent that is an issue,
